- Unlocking Organizational Agility: Strategies for Overcoming Strategic Jet Lag

Why do we feel perpetually lagging behind? The increasing complexity of the world we inhabit, the uncertainty baked into how it now operates and the paradoxical nature of AI automation can leave business leaders feeling like we're constantly missing the mark. Organizational silos, strategic blind spots and internal politics don't help. Gautam draws from his experience growing every major business at Google and YouTube, across three continents, to unveil two modes that leaders can internalize to (finally) navigate out of this state – using culture as the compass and judgment to reveal the map. Cultural context as input – how diverse these inputs are, which human behaviors are graduating from consumer trends to economic drivers, what is the internal culture that is misaligned with the external one. Active judgment to steer the output – how you bring together the right combination of people, processes and tools (including AI) to bring about an emergent strategy. How those decisions get communicated to stakeholders matters as much as the decision itself – the battle for good ideas is often within a company before it even reaches the real world. Taking a global lens, drawing from his own experience as well as businesses that have done (or failed at doing) this, Gautam aims to equip business leaders with tools for transformation for themselves and their teams.

- The Exhaustion Epidemic: Rethinking Ambition and Engagement

This talk or workshop unpacks the exhaustion and disengagement plaguing modern workplaces. Drawing on global insights and cultural shifts, speaker Gautam Ramdurai (leader at Google and YouTube in 3 continents) explores how the pandemic blurred work-life boundaries, how social media distorts ambition, and why employees feel disconnected from their company's goals. Leaders will leave with insights on how to reshape workplace culture, foster a sense of meaning, and help teams redefine ambition on their own terms. This isn't about band-aid wellness perks; it's about leading the change for a workplace where both people and businesses thrive.
