Sir Muir Gray is currently the Director of Better Value Healthcare and also works as an advisor to Public Health England and the NHS England Right Care programme. His work focuses on increasing value for populations and patients by systems design and culture change.

Sir Muir has worked in the Public Health Service in England since 1972. He has carried out a number of tasks in that time, including serving as the Director of Research and Development for Anglia and Oxford Regional Health Authority, establishing and serving as the Director of the UK National Screening Committee and establishing the National Library for Health.

Sir Muir is an internationally renowned authority on healthcare systems and has advised governments of several countries including UK, Australia, New Zealand, Italy, Spain and Germany.

Sir Muir is also a Professor in the Nuffield Department of Surgery at the University of Oxford and is the Director of the Value Based Healthcare Programme at the University. He was knighted in 2005 for the development of the foetal, maternal and child screening programme and the creation of the National Library for Health.
